ARDNEMOIL
ARECLEOCH
Henshall — Chambered Cairn, NX 174782. The last remains of this cairn are situated at 816’ on a small knoll in one of the fields at Arecleoch, in an extensive upland area. There are only slight traces of cairn material and it is impossible to estimate the shape and size of the original cairn, except that it cannot have stretched more than 30’ south of the chamber because of the steep drop in the ground. It is recorded as having been a

"large cairn" but it had been removed and the site reduced to its present condition before 1895. There remain 4 stones of a chamber c. 3' wide and c. 9' long. At the east end there is a large rounded boulder set on end, 3'9" high. The one slab on the north side is 4' long and 3' high. The stone opposite has been reduced in size, now 2' high, whilst at the east end of this south side is a stone represented only by its stump. The tall boulder could be interpreted as a pental stone of a chamber facing east, or as the backslap of a chamber facing west.
