CHURCHES AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS

FENWICK PARISH CHURCH
List [P/BL/5/AR, September 1963] 1 — 1643; belfry rebuilt 1864; renovated after 1931 fire by Gabriel Steel, architect, Kilmarnock; 1730 Maxwell bell. Graveyard contains Covenanters monuments and other headstones of interest. Refs: Hay 63 65 185 191 233 240 & 249; C&DA, v, 159-161. B

Hay — During the C17 a number of cruciform churches were built, of which such surviving examples as Fenwick 1643, Kirkintilloch 1644 and Lauder 1673 are of Greek cross plan ..... [Fenwick] has harled walls and pointed windows in 3 of its crow stepped gables; the fourth sustains a belfry, rebuilt in 1864. There are four lofts, the east one with a forestair and the others reached internally. Unfortunately the furnishings were destroyed by fire in 1930, though the jougs survive as a relic of earlier kirk discipline. .... John Hunter who built the pulpit in Ayr Auld Kirk was probably responsible for a very similar pulpit formerly extant at Fenwick and recorded in a drawing by MacGibbon and Ross. .... C17 loft fronts were destroyed by fire.

C&DA, V, 159 — Cruciform plan. Belfry in centre of west gable with pillars and ogee roof. End end of choir is Rowallan Aisle. Gallery has separate entrance on south side by an outside stair. Carved date stone in dormer over gallery stair inscribed '1649 WM' with shield with arms of Muirs of Rowallan (initials of William Muir: this is Sir William Muir, historian and builder of Rowallan Castle. "he delyted much in building and planting" and may have influenced the form of this picturesque church.).
Three galleries. South gallery has oak front, ornamented with pilasters and arches. Others of plain deal ornamented in imitation, but of later date as part of the original fronts have been used to patch seats. Some are of oak - an illustration in this ref shows panels with arms of Crawfurd of Crawfurdland, with initials IC: other Boyd and Cunningham arms quartered with initials IC. Both dated 1650: probably arms of Lord Boyd, who succeeded in 1655, and his lady, Jean Cunningham.

3SA, 1951, 497 — Burnt down in 1929 and immediately restored. Greek cross plan with stepped gables. Jougs still attached to outside wall.
