WAR MEMORIAL

AA 24.4.1919 — Resolved last Monday to commission Sir John Burnet to prepare plans for a war memorial.

AA 10.7.1919 — Sir John Burnet. He had rarely, he said, met with any suggestion that appealed more to the artistic sense than the committee's idea of a rough stone monument with individual stones for each fallen soldier. This was the first Scottish monument he had been asked to design. He would prefer to see it in a public place rather than the cemetery.

AA 5.2.1920 — Design by Sir John Burnett shown to Committee.

AA 8.12.1921 — Unveiled last Sunday in Afton Cemetery. Cenotaph of Northumberland freestone. 15' long, 6' broad, 11' high. Rising from two broad steps is the bevelled base with square corners. Above that, bold and free mouldings complete the plinth, from which rises the massive cambered block that forms the main body of the memorial. This block shows one panel at each end and 3 in front, of which the centre one is in high relief. The top of this block is bevelled on all sides up to an apex. Execution: Muir & Sons, Kilmarnock.

AR, liv, J-D1923, 36, xxxviii — Built 1921-1922, Sir J J Burnet.

[The minister of Parish Church (Martyrs), 1926-1949, was Andrew Burnett, b. Inverness 1876, died 25th May 1949. I assume not a relative]
