CONTENT STREET

General

AA, Th 9.1.1890, 4f [c.1840] — [Ayr Half a Century Ago: And Since, II]. '... Content Street, which extended, in those days, as now, to Craigie Gates: but it was a very different street then from the quiet thoroughfare it is now. Nearly every house contained a four-loom or six-loom weavers' shop and the rattling of shuttles was heard from morning to night; while every morning at five o'clock the street echoed to the beat of the drum or notes of the horn of the man whom the weavers employed to awaken them.'

AA, Th 19.6.1890, 5e [Ayr Half a Century Ago: And Since, XIV]

[1830] — 'Shops were not very numerous in the Newton sixty years ago. A number of them I remember well, perhaps because of dealings with them. Under the Steeple, for instance, was Becket the butcher, opposite was pie Wright, who was famed for his pies; further down was Smith the baker, and Murdoch the watchmaker. At the head of the Newton was Gray the grocer, and at the corner of the Burnside was the brewery of the famous Jean Cuthbert ...'
